CHAMPION FAT AS HOG SAYS BRADY

By WILLIAM A. BRADY.
(Special Cable to Boston American.)

PARIS, June 27.—If Ed Curley, Right Cross, Bat Masterson or any one of the dozen sporting writers could have been with me yesterday and if the Johnson-Moran fight were to be staged anywhere in the United States, it is very doubtful if there would be any fight at all tonight.

Everybody remembers the roasting handed out to Sam Langford after his contest with Gunboat Smith in Boston, as Langford was overweight. I saw the fight, but Langford was syphilitic and in perfect condition compared with the Jack Johnson I saw punching a bag in a dance hall yesterday afternoon.

Johnson is hog fat, great folds of flesh hang over his trunks, and although he showed no paunch the old washboard-ridged stomach has disappeared and his mid-section looks soft and flabby.

It was evident to the least discerning spectator that his wind was anything but good.

Johnson has always been inclined to fat, but not in the sense that he has run to sogginess, but that all the muscles have been hidden, but the Johnson I saw is fully ten pounds overweight and it's all in the wrong place—the waist line.

In his dressing room I exchanged a few words with Johnson and this is as nearly accurate a summary of what was said as I can set it down:

"What do you want to tell the readers of Hearst newspapers, Johnson?" I asked.

The negro shut his eyes, waited for

DOCTOR ORDERS ROOSEVELT TO REST 4 MONTHS

OYSTER BAY, June 27.—After a conference with his physician Colonel Roosevelt announced today that he had decided to curtail his plans for the Summer political campaign.

Dr. Alexander Lambert came to Sagamore Hill from New York today and after making an examination told the Colonel he would have to take a rest. Although this news was displeasing to the energetic statesman he had to consent to it.

Ever since his return from the Brazilian jungles the former President has suffered from intermittent attacks of fever, which have greatly weakened him.

"You must do as little in the way of campaign work as possible," the doctor told Colonel Roosevelt. "Your system is ridden with malaria and your throat is weak. You ought to have four months rest."

"But the campaign would be over by that time," the colonel expostulated.

"Can't help that," retorted the physician. "Rest is more important than politics."

Later the doctor said he found Colonel Roosevelt was suffering from enlargement of the spleen, as well as malarial fever.

Colonel Roosevelt told the correspondents he has cancelled his proposed trip to California where he intended speaking in behalf of Governor Hiram Johnson. He said he would have to cut down his speechmaking all around, but would probably deliver about half a dozen important political addresses in this State. When he travels he will eliminate rear platform talks.

A telegram was sent to Pittsburgh notifying the Pennsylvania Progressives that he will make but one speech there instead of two as planned. It will be delivered next Tuesday.

LOWELL BRIDE SLAIN; HUSBAND CONFESSES

LOWELL, June 27.—Wilfred J. Blais came to the police station just before dawn today and said: "I think I've killed my wife."

The police found her strangled in her room.

A little before noon today Blais made this confession to Superintendent Redmond Welch:

CONFESSES HE STRANGLED HER.

I was helping my brother move his furniture. After we got through we had some beer—not enough to make us drunk. I didn't take as much as the rest. My wife didn't drink at all. After we had gone to bed she reproached me for drinking. She said if I kept it up, she would have to leave me.

We were in bed then, but we quarrelled and got up. Then I hit her—knocked her down—threw myself on her and took her by the throat.

I don't remember how long I choked her. The next I knew, I was across the room, and I was telling her not to lie there on the floor.

Then I went over and she was getting cold. So I thought I had killed her and came here.

OPERATION ON HEAD.

Blais will be examined as to his sanity. About four years ago he had an operation upon his head. He is a mill-worker, a skilled man, industrious and self-respecting.

He has never quarrelled, so far as is known, with his wife. He always gave her the major portion of his savings. Their life was calm and happy.

The police believe his deed today was the result of sudden insanity. He still seems stupefied. He has recently been employed in the Hamilton Manufacturing Company's mills.

He and the woman had been married only four months. Her name was Celimere Blais and they lived at No. 46 Aiken avenue.

GIVES HIMSELF UP

The police learned of the tragedy through Blais. He walked to the police station at 3 o'clock and told Night Captain Thomas Atkinson he had murdered his wife.

"You did what?" asked Atkinson in amazement.

"I think I have murdered my wife," Blais repeated and gave the captain his name and address.

Captain Atkinson called Patrolman Patrick Noonan on the telephone and sent him to the house. Noonan forced an entrance and found Mrs. Blais dead in bed. She had been strangled. There were finger marks on her throat. Her hands and face were scratched and the rooms showed signs of a terrible struggle.

Noonan phoned back to the station and the police began their investigation. Other persons living in the house were aroused, but nobody was found who heard any noise or witnessed the struggle.

Blais appeared dazed. He said he could not remember anything that had happened, and the police failed in their first efforts to get any further information from him. After several minutes of useless questioning the police abandoned the attempt, and the prisoner fell into a deep slumber on a cot in the station house.

Alfred Blais, a brother of the prisoner, lives in the same house in Aiken avenue. He moved there yesterday, and last night told the police they had a house warming, which was attended by both his brother and his wife. He declared there was no trouble and that the party ended at midnight. As far as he knew, everybody retired a short time later.

1 HURT, MANY IN PERIL, AS RUINS ARE DYNAMITED

SALEM, June 27.—One man was injured and several others had narrow escapes when walls of the P. A. Fields shoe factory, which stood within 50 feet of the Boston & Maine Railroad station, was dynamited today. The work was done under the direction of Director of Public Works Patrick J. Kelley, after the ruins had first been inspected by State Detective Fred Flynn.

The injured man was John Collins, twenty-seven, of Andrews street, Salem, who was standing on the depot platform. He was hit in the back by half of a flying brick and taken to the Armory Hospital by militiamen who pressed an automobile into service.

Others who stood on the platform were showered with dust and dirt. Detective Flynn had a narrow escape when a piece of heavy timber fell within a few feet of him.

Dynamiting continued all during the day, and the loud reports caused several minor panics and mad rushes through the crowds in the vicinity of where the work was being carried on. All walls which remained standing after the fire will be razed.

The Public Works Department also cleared the streets and began to map out plans for traffic conveniences for the crowd expected tomorrow.

Resolute Out of Cup Yacht Trial

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., June 27.—The yacht Resolute will not race the Vanitie and Defiance today in the second contest for the Vanderbilt cup. An accident to the bowsprit rigging forced the race out. The Resolute was towed to the Herreshoff yard at Bristol, R. I. It may be a week before she races again.

COMPANION ON RIDE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Pinned beneath an automobile, Anna Powers was burned to death on the Newburyport turnpike early today. Oscar J. Mansur, an auto dealer, was desperately injured and is on the dangerous list at the Malden Hospital. The police are trying to locate a man who is said to have been in the car with the two.

HAD BEEN TO FERNCROFT INN.

The party had been to Ferncroft Inn. The police theory is that Mansur was engaged to drive the car; that Miss Powers and the missing man were passengers; and that at the time the accident occurred, Miss Powers had taken the wheel.

The tragedy occurred at Hawkes' Corner, North Saugus. Swerving to pass a team, the automobile skidded on the oiled road and turned turtle. The girl was pinned under the car. Mansur was thrown clear. The car at once caught fire.

Just what happened then may never be known. But certain it is that when the girl's screams and Mansur's shouts brought residents of the neighborhood to the scene, Mansur was madly striving to beat out the flames on the car, and the screams of the pinioned woman had been silenced by the flame. Mansur's own clothing was afire.

L. G. Hawkes was one of the first on the scene. He telephoned to the police, after extinguishing the fire on Mansur's clothing. Mansur fainted. A passing automobile took him to the Malden Hospital. There he revived enough to recognize his wife when she was hurried to the hospital.

TRIED TO RESCUE GIRL.

Mansur, it is believed, would have escaped with minor injuries had he not fought to extinguish the flames which were approaching the pinioned girl.

When the automobile was at last removed the girl's body was lifted out. But it fell to charred bits when handled. It was taken to a Saugus undertaking plant, and Medical Examiner J. J. Pinkham viewed it.

Anna Powers, the dead girl, lived at No. 56 Fayette street, South End. She was a former telephone operator. Her grandfather is Jeremiah Downey of Heath street, Brookline. One of her best friends is Anna Sweeney of No. 14 Winchester street. She said today:

"Anna Powers came past the house to see me last night just about supper time. She didn't say where she was going."

Miles Powers had two beautiful diamond rings, which helped in identifying her body.

Mansur had a place of business at No. 469 Columbus avenue, and lived at No. 17 Blackwood street. He had three automobiles, which he rented out, usually driving one himself, and employing two other men. His wife, at their home, said today:

"My husband came back from New York yesterday after a three-day business trip.

"After dinner, at about 6 o'clock last evening, he said he had to go to the shop and see how business was going. He left as usual. That was the last I heard from him till 3 a. m. I did not worry for often he drove on trips that kept him out all night.

"Early today I was routed out of bed by a man with an automobile. He said my husband was dying at the Malden Hospital. I hurried to leave the house and to the hospital at dawn.

"Oscar was dying, they said. His eyes were closed. He opened them and recognized me, but could only mumble words—could not talk. He could not tell what happened.

THREE PERSONS IN CAR.

"The nurse told me not to question him, that he was very weak. She told me to be ready for anything—that he might die at any minute.

"I went to the scene of the acci-

BEGIN 4 SEPARATE INQUIRIES AT SALEM

Searching investigation into the cause of causes of the Salem fire, with its toll of six deaths and $15,000,000 loss, was made today by the following officials:

The Salem city police.

The Metropolitan Park police.

The fire marshal's office of the Massachusetts District police, commonly called the "State police."

Insurance experts and detectives from the big underwriters who are hardest hit.

The investigation probed three points.

SINISTER QUESTION.

The most sinister of these questions and one which Mayor Hurley of Salem says may be put up to the District Attorney for action is this:

Was there any cause for the rapid spread of the fire to South

STATE DETECTIVES AT WORK ON GREAT FIRE MYSTERY

Scenes at the great conflagration in Salem aroused the pity of all beholders, many ofvhom for the first time looked upon intense human suffering, as Jack London would say, "in the raw." Among those caught by the camera were Miss Helen Calley, ten, a refugee, caring for her twin sisters, Rosa and Rosali. Children too young to realize the extent of the calamity are shown asleep on the Common.

EVIDENCE TO GO TO ESSEX PROSECUTOR

and North Salem beyond the natural progress of the flames and the carrying of sparks and embers by the wind?

The two other points under investigation were:

The storage of high-powered explosives and combustibles, like gasoline, ether and gunnotton by leather manufacturers in greater quantities than allowed by city ordinances and insurance rules.

The illegal keeping of gasoline by wealthy families in the "automobile belt" along Lafayette street.

SEAL WORKS HARD.

On the most serious of these points, the question of whether the conflagration was from any but so-called legitimate causes, the men under State Fire Marshal Neal are working with especial energy.

State Officer Flynn brought one man to headquarters and put him through a "third degree," which resulted in the end in the man being allowed to go.

This man's place of business is located some distance from the fire zone. His establishment caught fire from the inside, but was saved.

Mayor Hurley made no bones today about saying that he doubts that wind alone carried burning embers from "Blubber Hollow," where the main fire started, clear across the railroad track into the South Salem district, where the second fire came.

Attention is being called to the fact that the high elevation of the land where the South Salem part of the fire started would require embers to be carried to a great height, as well as a long distance, in order to cause the second fire.

MAYOR HURLEY TALKS.

Mayor Hurley said today to the AMERICAN:

It is hard to make me believe that the wind blew the burning embers across the railroad tracks from where the fire started, in Blubber Hollow, to the tenement district in South Salem, where the second fire originated.

And then again, I am very much interested to learn just how the third fire in North Salem originated. Fire causes are great mysteries and few, if any, of the big conflagrations have ever been thoroughly explained. But in this case, I intend to get at the bottom of the matter and should evidence warrant I will place the case at once in the hands of the District Attorney.

POINTS ARE CITED.

In regard to the presence of high explosives and combustibles in shoe and leather factories, the following points are being cited:

Leather men, especially the manufacturers, use ether, gasoline, naphtha and gun-cotton in extracting grease from leather, in cleansing it and in other processes.

They are allowed, by the city and the insurance companies, to keep small quantities of it under certain restrictions.

The manufacturers who use these explosives and inflammables in great quantity are constantly tempted to buy in bulk, not only on account of the reduction in initial cost, but also for the saving in shipping charges by avoiding split consignments.

The investigators were told today that some manufacturers have been keeping these dangerous materials in much larger quantities than allowed by law or by insurance rules.

GARAGES BLAMED.

The third angle of the fire probe pointed toward private garages as sharing some responsibility.

Under the usual municipal regulations a Salem person wishing to store gasoline for automobile purposes applied for a permit and, if the gasoline well or tank was located sufficiently remote from the garage and from dwellings, the permit was granted. But, after getting the permits, the applicants are said to have lessened the distance limit on the sly in some cases.

The police have found that some of the automobile owners in the aristocratic districts had been storing gasoline illegally near their garages or houses, as shown by traces of the well or tank and the foundations of garage or residence.

The police and insurance investigators are making careful examination of residence ruins in the well-to-do section, to note just how far away the gasoline storage tanks and wells were put.

Another point in this same connection is that some automobile owners have kept gasoline stored in cans on their premises without getting permits.

Rigid investigation is being made of all these points. The police are doing it to see if there is any criminal responsibility. The insurance experts and detectives are acting in behalf of their companies.

NEW FIRE IN CITY.

Stricken Salem was startled afresh when, within twenty-four hours after the greatest conflagration in the history of New England had been put under control, three alarms were sounded for a new fire which started on Derby wharf, in the ill-fated south section, where the big fire started.

Intense excitement prevailed and great crowds of frenzied men and women gathered as the warning fire whistles sounded the triple alarm.

Militiamen and police were tasked to the utmost to preserve order as the blaze of the new fire lit up the skies. Meanwhile, the firemen battled successfully with the flames.

A hurry call was sent for two additional companies of Ninth Regiment militia—Companies B and I of Boston—which were both on the scene early today to reinforce the militiamen already in Salem to guard against looting and disorder.

SCORES STILL MISSING.

Scores were reported still missing today. Many of these are doubtless in the refugee camps, while some have sought shelter with friends in nearby towns and cities. Mothers separated from their children, fathers from their families and children from their parents in the confusion of the fire tried in many cases vainly to effect a reunion.

The services of the Boston AMERICAN Relief Bureau were much in demand, and through this and other means many anxious men and women located their families and friends, while others not so fortunate left addresses where they might be found or where the loved ones might leave word for them.

An insurance adjuster, who went carefully over the fire-swept area, today estimated the loss at $12,000,000, of which $10,000,000 was covered by insurance. This insurance, it was stated, was well distributed, the heaviest amount falling upon any one company being $400,000.

About 20,000 people are homeless. Nearly 2,500 refugees are in the several camps established by the State Commissary Department and the State Medical Department. Others have been given temporary homes by relatives or friends.

HOMES GONE, FACE FUTURE WITH COURAGE

With that splendid courage that so often comes to people in the time of a great crisis, the fire sufferers of Salem—almost to a man—are rallying from the crushing effects of their loss and facing the future with a new determination. Even the Poles and French, who were the greatest sufferers, most of them losing all of their little possessions, will tell you in halting English, "It is not so bad. We still have the children, so we thank God."

All day a steady stream of homeless people wandered through the streets or sought refuge in the camps provided for them. Here and there on the Common a few guarded their possessions and with friends or relatives laid plans for the future.

"Pretty hard to know just what to do when all you have left are a few clothes," said Joseph LaBunt, smilingly indicating a leather suit case in which he had saved the few things his wife had time to collect.

LaBunt works in Beverly and like many another Salemite returned to find his home in ruins. During the evening he and his young son were separated from Mrs. LaBunt, and she spent the night with five other refugees in a hospitable home near Peabody. Though they had been twelve years in accumulating their few possessions, the La Bunts were far from downcast, and they set out to find a room in which to spend the night.

CHEERED UP BY TENTS.

A volley of cheers went up from the youngsters on the Common when a truck bearing a pile of canvas hove in sight. "Here comes the tents —now we won't have to sleep out," they cried. It would take more than a ruined city to dampen a child's ardor at the prospect of a night in a tent, and they were very free in their expressions of delight.

The breadline that had been established in the early morning hours was well patronized all day and many hundreds received bread and milk for themselves or to take home to relatives. Marie Tremblay, a pretty French girl, who came for supplies for her brothers and sisters, was one of a family of five which was routed by the flames and lost everything they owned. Even a pianola that was Marie's most cherished possession was burned, "and I guess after this it will be some time before we ever get another. Next to the loss of the pianola, I think I hated to see my chest of linens and embroideries go. I have been saving them for a long time and then had to leave them," she said dispetedly." When it was intimated that these linens might be part of her trousseau she blushed prettily and denied it. Of course eventually they might be used for that purpose, "but just now—no."

One of the most pathetic cases to come to the bread line during the day was Francois Gosarsenault, who with his wife and eight children had spent the night wandering from place to place. The children, the youngest a babe in arms, and the next one twins, little more than two years old, were exhausted and sank in a pathetic heap on the curb as they drank the milk and ate the crackers the soldiers handed out. The oldest boy, a lad of fourteen, explained that his father had lost his work since the mills were burned and unless he was able to get a job soon things would go hard with them. They were taken care of later in the day by a relief committee.

FEW INJURED ARE TREATED.

At the Red Cross headquarters the nurses said very few people had been attended. Either the sufferers did not know where to come or the injuries were so slight that they did not think it worth while to seek special assistance. One little Polish maiden, with a burned eye, was being fed great ham sandwiches and goblets of milk.

In spite of the attentions she was not very comfortable, and every few moments expressed a desire to be on her way. They succeeded in holding her until a specialist could arrive and do something for her sore eye.

Flames Destroy Derby's Wharf

The fire stopped within two houses of the birthplace of Hawthorne on Union street. The "house of the seven gables," the customs house, the "old witch house," the town house where the first provincial Congress was held, the Peabody Museum and the Essex Institute were all in the safety zone. One of the most treasured points on the water front, Richard Derby's wharf, the oldest wharf in Salem and the second oldest in the United States, was destroyed.

Bacon Store Offers to Furnish Teams

The W. & A. Bacon Company have sent Mayor Curley a check for $500 for the sufferers in Salem, and promised the use of their teams at any hour of the day or night that the Mayor calls for them to transport supplies from the city receiving station in the office of the Bay State Street Railway.

The latter company has offered the services of its cars free of charge to transport all supplies collected to Salem.

100 Telephones Ruined by Fire

More than 1,000 telephones were destroyed in the Salem fire. About one-third of the cables connecting the entire North Shore with Boston and the metropolitan district were burned at a wooden bridge on Hinckland avenue. The service was partially restored when emergency installations were made as soon as the debris cooled.

Commonwealth Pier Gives Tons of Fish

Fish dealers at the Commonwealth Pier have offered 15,000 pounds of fish to Salem. 5,000 pounds has already been used.

A. Shuman Company Gives Prompt Aid

Gardiner M. Lane, treasurer of the Salem relief fund which is being collected by Governor Walsh's central committee, has received the following letter and contribution from A. Shuman:

My Dear Mr. Lane—Enclosed herewith I hand you check for $1,000 on behalf of our firm, A. Shuman & Co., toward the Salem Relief fund.

This terrible calamity which has befallen the old, historic city of Salem, calls for prompt help, and I am sure it will appeal to all the good people of Massachusetts, who will feel as I do, that "he gives twice who gives quickly."

With my best wishes that your committee will succeed in raising a fund adequate to the great need, I am, faithfully yours,

A. SHUMAN.

NO EPIDEMIC FOR SALEM, SAYS HEALTH BOARD

The Salem Hord of Health today denied that there was any epidemic in Salem as a result of the fire. The board admitted, however, that it had been unable to find four scarlet fever patients whose cases had been reported in the Point district previous to the fire. Every effort is being made to find these patients to prevent the disease spreading. One case of measles has been found among the refugees.

The medical arrangements for the care of the refugees are in the hands of the military surgeons, assisted by the Board of Health. Surgeon-General Frank P. Williams is in charge of the medical bureau, and he is assisted by Major R. W. Foster of the 5th Regiment and Major Cutter.

The first step will be to get all the refugees in organized camps and then to have a careful daily medical inspection. Dr. Thomas Harrington, health physician of the Boston School Board, was ordered to Salem today by Governor Walsh. He co-operated with the military directors and the Board of Health.

Dr. William B. McDermott of the Board of Health said today: "Reports that scores of scarlet fever cases had broken out among the refugees are false. There were four cases of scarlet fever in the city in the tenement house district before the fire broke out. We are no worrying to find those afflicted children. There has been no outbreak of scarlet fever since the fire. One case of measles, reported before the fire, has been found and quarantined.

It developed today that Salem was without a health board when the fire broke out, the three members having been discharged by Director of Public Health Thomas Lally. They were Dr. William V. McDermott, William O. Safford and Nathaniel Levesque. Their resignation was demanded as a result of a disagreement with Director Lally over the demand that Health Clerk Newcomb be discharged. Today the Board of Health met and Director Lally decided that the resignations should be cancelled and the three men agreed to continue in office.

New $750,000 Back Bay Phone Exchange Displaces Tremont

With the putting into service of the new $750,000 Back Bay telephone central office on Belvidere street, early today, the Tremont exchange was displaced, and the present Back Bay central office on Newbury street discontinued. About two-thirds of the telephones in the Tremont exchange will be added to the Back Bay exchange and the remainder will be served by the Oxford switchboard.

The number of girls at the Back Bay exchange will be increased after Sunday to 225, fifty more than the number handling the present traffic.

New Home Treatment for All Hairy Growths

(Modes of Today)

With a plain delatone paste, it is now an easy matter for any woman to keep her face, neck and arms free from hairy or fuzzy growths. Just enough paste is made with powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface. This is applied and in 2 or 3 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed. After this treatment every sign of hair has vanished, and the skin is free from spot or blemish. Be very careful to see that you get genuine delatone.

dent. The State road there is just wide enough for two automobiles to pass. It slopes steeply into marsh at either side.

"I saw my husband's automobile upside down beside the road. A farmer nearby told me that he ran to the accident when it happened. He said that Oscar told him there were three people in the car—a man, a woman and himself. He said the woman was driving the car. He told the farmer the accident occurred in trying to pass a team that came along without lights.

"The body of the woman was found underneath the car. That proves to me she was driving. Had Oscar been driving he would have been pinned down by the steering wheel. It always happens so. Besides, he is a careful driver, never had an accident. I believe he was in the tonneau. Had he been in the front seat the accident would never have happened.

"If there was another man in the car, he evidently escaped. He may-be did not want to be implicated.

"Oscar was a member of the Ferncroft Club for business reasons. Much of his trade came in driving parties to and from the Inn.

"At the hospital they gave me his stickpin, watch and about $100 in money which he had.

"We have been married nine years. Oscar was thirty years old. We both came from Nashua, N. H. He was an ideal husband, a good man. We had no children. He was always jolly, made a joke of everything and made everybody his friend."

The car which overturned was registered in Mrs. Mansur's name.

SOCIETY GIRLS HARD AT WORK AMONG SALEM FIRE REFUGEES

PITEOUS PLEAS MADE BY THE HOMELESS

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Hungry, worn out from loss of sleep, worry and the anxiety of looking for lost relatives, their once happy homes smouldering all about them, and in many cases hanging onto the last shred of what was home, it was a dejected and pity-rousing lot of humanity thronging the streets of the burnt sections of Salem, sitting about on the Common, standing in the long bread line and in the line where clothing was supplied by them.

It was, however, only the few who had recovered from the first shocks of the horror who had the energy to go looking for some of the few human comforts, all of which had been swept so ruthlessly and so quickly from them.

For hours they had remained as in a stupor, not hungry, not tired, not thirsty—just dazed by the horror which had come upon them so suddenly and left them so absolutely destitute. Without homes or food, many of them without sufficient clothing, but seemingly having nothing in mind save the joy of escape with their lives, they stand about in small and silent groups.

By night there were few who had not been gathered under the philanthropic wings of the Commonwealth and were being cared for in one way or another. The bread line and the offices where clothing was supplied were where the real heart of the affair was laid bare. As I sat in the rooms where the clothing was being distributed, I saw one tired little mother after another come to the door, bravely start to relate her story to the man in charge and burst helplessly into tears. In each case, however, she was handled most tenderly, little children for whom she sought aid were supplied.

It was here that many of the North Shore society girls showed their real worth as they worked over the piles of clothing, sorting, piling and fitting them to the needy, and all with such genuine heart interest and concern that it did one good just to watch them.

SOCIETY GIRLS HELP.

Miss Loring, Miss Charlotte Read, Mrs. Walter Hunnewell, Jr., Miss Marjorie Lee, Mrs. Alanson Daniels, Mrs. Richard Waters and Mrs. Caroline Emmerton, the wealthiest woman in Salem, were a few who worked here untiringly. Standing out in happy contrast to the infinitely pathetic figures were the group of youngsters brought to be fitted to clothes and who each seemed to have his or her own idea of what they wanted. Many were over particular about the fit and shape of the hats they were getting, while others took just what was given them—took it gratefully and quietly went their way.

In the bread line tiny children came with their bottles for milk to take home to their mother and baby sisters or brothers, and while waiting watched one another sadly and forlornly.

Women with several tiny tots hanging to their skirts and the youngest in their arms, stood to get provisions for their little dependents who were already restless and weeping from hunger and weakness. Some of them had been without food since they had eaten their breakfasts the previous morning.

There were, as usual, those there who were not there of necessity. After talking with one woman, who had lost everything and was getting her first taste of food in twenty-four hours, I approached a woman just behind her and asked her if she had lost her home, too. No, she had not lost her home, she told me. The fire hadn't injured her in any way, but she came, as she put it, "because everybody else was coming."

A little girl, who had stood in the line for some time waiting her turn, informed me that her people hadn't been burned out, and she had plenty to eat at home. When I asked her why she had come there she glibly informed me that she met some "kids" and they told her to come along. This was little Helen Olinsky, who afterward became my Polish interpreter, and was quick to discriminate between those there of necessity and those there for the "fun of it."

Standing up against the wall after a trip through the bread line was a tired-looking man, who, while he ate his bread and beans, told me of how he had lost his little home, for which he had worked all his life and had nearly lost his family. He was A. A. Barton of No. 4 Hawthorne place. He succeeded in getting his family to North Salem, and now has no place to go and nothing to eat, not a cent of money and absolutely dependent upon the bread line and the help of others.

TELL OF LOST HOMES.

Philip Ringer, who stood by with his wife and her little brood of children clinging to her skirts and wondering what all the confusion and change meant, told me of the little home they had lost on upper Phillips street and of how the day was so warm his wife and children had been scantily clad and were now in need of shoes and clothing.

Joseph Cartigna and his six little girls were at the bread line, getting what they could themselves and preparing to take something back to the mother and baby on the Common. He was a driver of a coal team. He had no insurance and saved nothing. Besides, his position was gone.

Miss Helen Frick and her father, Henry Clay Frick, took an active interest in the work. Hundreds of pounds of cooked food and clothing were supplied by the Fricks. Large quantities of milk and other food products were hurried to the headquarters of the commissary department at the armory in the Fricks' automobiles. Buttermilk was also shipped to refugees and workers by the farmers.

PEOPLE RALLY TO GOVERNOR'S CALL FOR HELP

Thousands of dollars in checks and pledges today poured into the office of Gardiner M. Lane, treasurer of the State Salem Relief Fund, in answer to the appeal for funds issued by Governor David I. Walsh, and by nightfall it was estimated more than $200,000 will have been raised for the relief of the stricken city.

The Governor's plea has found ready response throughout the State. Practically every city and town in the Commonwealth has organized a relief committee and money, food and clothing are being rushed to Salem as fast as possible.

Governor Walsh has appointed the following committee to take charge of the relief fund:

Governor David I. Walsh, chairman; Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry, Bishop William Lawrence, the Rev. Michael J. Scanlon, director of Catholic charities; Robert Winsor, James J. Phelan, John S. Kent, representative Shoe and Leather Exchange of New England; Edmund Billings, Philip Stockton, John F. Moore, William A. Gaston, John F. Fitzgerald, Henry Parkman, James L. Richards, A. C. Hatheskey, F. L. Higginson, Jr., treasurer of the committee, Gardiner M. Lane, No. 44 State street, Boston.

OPEN HEADQUARTERS.

The committee has established their headquarters in the Armory at Salem, to co-operate with the city officials, the militia and the Red Cross. It is the purpose of the Governor to relieve Adjutant-General Cole of the burden of the relief work, so that he can devote his attention to the military situation.

A sub-committee of seven is at Salem in charge of the work. The members are William A. Gaston, Bishop Lawrence, Father Scanlon, John F. Moors, John F. Fitzgerald, F. L. Higginson, Jr., and James J. Phelan. Another committee composed of Robert Winsor, Philip Stockton and Edmund Billings, will stay in Boston to supervise the raising of funds. All funds are to be sent in to the treasurer, Gardiner M. Lane.

Bread and Money from Business Men

From private individuals and business firms offers of aid for Salem have literally poured in to the committee and to Mayor Hurley. The Fox Baking Company is giving 1,000 loaves of bread a day for seven days. The Bonny Bairn Hospital of Cohasset has agreed to take in thirty children and fifteen mothers. The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has contributed $1,000.

TOTAL SALEM FIRE DEAD IS PLACED AT SIX

The total number of known dead in the Salem fire whose bodies have been found or accounted for was placed at six today. They are:

Mrs. Jennie Cunningham.

Samuel P. Withey, a Civil War veteran.

Mrs. Edward McGlone.

Miss Mary Tighe.

Mary Quinn, two-months-old daughter of Edward J. Quinn.

Unidentified body so badly charred that sex is undetermined.

Several other persons are believed to have been lost in the fire but the ruins in many places have not cooled sufficiently to permit a thorough search. SET INSURANCE LOSS AT OVER $10,000,000

The estimated insurance loss of the Salem fire will amount to $10,000,000, which will be borne by many different companies. The largest loser will be the Associated Factory Mutuals, with a loss of $2,500,000 on the Naumkeag Steam Cotton Mills. The largest loss by a foreign stock insurance company is that of the Royal of London, estimated at $400,000.

The Massachusetts Fire & Marine Insurance Company had risks of about $46,000 in the burned district. The loss of the Royal Insurance Company was stated to be between $200,000 and $300,000. The New England department of the Pennsylvania reports a loss of about $100,000, divided almost equally between manufacturing and dwelling house property. The Firemen's Fund estimates its loss at about $50,000. Other losses are: Hartford Fire Insurance Company, $70,000; H. L. Whittemore & Co., $2,000; Russell & Fairfield, $1,500; Fidelity Phoenix, $116,000. The local body which will act on the Salem fire is the New England Fire Insurance Exchange, which is to have a special meeting.

Insurance men blame the great loss to the inadequate water supply.

CARRANZA MAY TAKE PART IN MEDIATION

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The invitation of the South American mediators to General Carranza to participate in informal conferences, to compose the internal affairs of Mexico has not as yet been accepted, but his agents believe that he will take advantage of it.

Rafeal Zubaran, the Washington agent, stated that he believed that the General will authorize the participation of his representatives in the conference, but in the meantime, the military campaign against Huerta will continue.

The only message that came from Carranza to the agency here brought the information that the revolutionary generals again had assured the first chief of their support and cooperation.

Mr. Breceda, Carranza's secretary, sent several messages asking for definite instructions regarding the proposal of informal mediation negotiations.

POLICE NEAR SECOND ARREST IN BALLOU CASE

STAMFORD, Ct., June 27.—A startling new feature in the mysterious Ballou tragedy developed when Homer S. Cummings, State's Attorney of Connecticut, advanced the theory today that a second man, a friend of both Ballou and Mrs. Helen Angle, was present in the Angle studio when Ballou suffered the injuries that caused his death.

This man, according to Mr. Cummings and Chief of Police William Brennan, is known to the police and can be arrested at any time. He is said to be a Stamford politician, a friend of Ballou and lately a close friend of Mrs. Angle. There is no evidence as yet to warrant the police in connecting him officially with the case.

There were other developments which the police assert add strength to their case.

Prosecutor Phillips that Mrs. Angle saw Ballou and another woman dining in a local restaurant on the evening of the tragedy.

NEW BLOOD STAINS FOUND.

Second—Ballou's gold spectacles were found hidden in a small box outside a bathroom window of the Angle apartment. They were not broken, which the police declare discredits the theory of falling.

Third—Mr. Cummings discovered blood in the apartment and at the top of the second flight of stairs. Mrs. Angle declares Ballou fell straight to the landing at the head of the first flight, which fails to explain the presence of blood higher up.

Although Mrs. Angle collapsed three times at the coroner's inquiry Thursday she was apparently in excellent health and spirits today.

She talked with reporters for two hours and read all the New York newspapers.

"SIR JAMES" COMES BACK TO FACE CRITICS

"On next Tuesday I will receive my patent of nobility and prove that my title is genuine and that the firm of which I am at the head is financially sound," said Sir James Carlton, who claims to be an English nobleman, and the genuineness of whose title has been the cause of considerable doubt to Bostonians. He claims that he will remain in Boston about two months, during which time he will erect a large manufacturing plant in Dorchester. The plant is now incorporated for $1,000,000.

Carlton claims that he is the victim of an organized system of blackmailers, whom he intends to fight as soon as he receives the patent.

Carlton continued, "I not only have not a share of stock to sell in this million-dollar corporation, but will forfeit $1,000 in cash to any one who can show that I even allowed a share to be sold.

"When I was planning to purchase a Brookline estate through a State street firm I found the blackmailers at my heels, and my wife said that she wanted to live privately while I was waging the fight against them, as I am going to do. Therefore, we went privately to Cambridge, where I am living as Mr. James.

"I have signed my option for land in Dorchester, and the ground will be turned within a month. A building will be constructed directly from blue prints originally drawn for the Fore River Company."

He also adds that he won't accept a cent of American capital, as it is not wanted.

Many Cities Move to Aid Refugees

Many cities today organized relief work. Mayor Thomas F. Kearns of Waltham organized a branch of the State relief committee. Mayor Shumaker of Malden called a mass meeting of citizens for tonight. In Medford, Mayor Taylor called a similar meeting. Mayor Chambers of Everett has called a meeting for tonight. From Providence, R. I., Mayor Gainer wired his offer of assistance to Mayor Hurley. Mayor Charles B. Hayes of Manchester has made an appeal for funds.

Red-Headed Child of Brunette Parents

CHICAGO, June 27.—Pilots of the eugenic movement were given the following chart today by W. L. Tower of the University of Chicago:

If both parents have light hair, their children will have light hair.

If both parents have dark hair of the glossy variety, about one child out of four will have red hair.

If both parents have fair skins, ninety-one times out a hundred the child will be a blond, once out of fifteen times it will be of an intermediate type, and once out of fifty-five times a brunette.

If both parents are tall or short, their children will follow their example, while if one parent is tall and the other short, the children will be either tall or medium, but never "shorties."

National Shawmut Bank Sends $300,000

MARION COREY IS MARRIED

SYBIL DAVIS WEDS AT PLYMOUTH TODAY

Mrs. Otis C. Wheeler, former Wollaston girl, one of this week's interesting brides, now on her honeymoon.

Among the important brides of recent date was pretty Marion Estes Corey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Corey of No. 704 Commonwealth avenue, whose marriage to Otis Chester Wheeler of Berlin, Mass., was one of the interesting affairs of the week.

The bride, who is a former Wollaston girl, had for her maid of honor Miss Emily Wheeler, sister of the bridegroom, and the bridesmaids were Miss Mila Bates of Quincy, Miss Leah Hennigan and Miss Miriam Rhodes of Wollaston, and Miss Gertrude Johnson of Lebanon, N. H. The groom's best man was Theodore E. Corey, brother of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Melcher and their daughter, Miss Dorothy French Melcher, of Brookline, are sailing Tuesday on the Carmania for a three months' motor trip through Europe. They will return to their camp in the White Mountains.

An interesting bride of the week, now on her honeymoon, is Mrs. Henry Cook, who was formerly Miss Nina White. The bride wore a handsome gown of white satin and family lace and carried a large bouquet of valley lilies. She had for her maid of honor her sister, Miss Hester White, who were nile green satin and carried a large bouquet of roses. The best man was Jack Ballantine of East Boston.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride at No. 1537 Blue Hill avenue, and was attended by a large number of friends of the bride and groom. They are motoring to the White Mountains where they are to stay two weeks. Upon their return they will reside in Mattapan.

NEW RUMORS OF DISSENSION ON THE DEFIANCE

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., June 27.—Rumors of dissension on board of the Boston backed boat Defiance are beginning to crop out.

I have it on the best of authority that if the Defiance was actually sailed for all there was in her the Defiance might do good work.

There is no question but this ofay ton backed boat has not been sailed for all there is in her.

Charlie Adams, skipper of the Resolute, says that the Defiance is a fast lined boat.

Then he quits talking.

Nat Herreshoff, a man who does not talk much, says:

"There is nothing to it now but the Resolute."

The Resolute has shown that even in light weather she is a boat that can sail some.

Nat Herreshoff, Charlie Adams and Bert Emmons have proved themselves a great trio.

The Vanitie, even with a new skipper, has not been able to hold its own.

Bill Dennis, deposed skipper of the Vanitie, said that this Boston built, bronze boat would win under her present condition.

Two races on Long Island Sound have proved that Bill Dennis is right.

Today these three cup defense boats start again for the cup offered by Harold S. Vanderbilt. It is a best here 10 to 7 that the Resolute wins.

Special Yacht Race for the Eastern Y. C.

The Eastern Yacht Club will give a special open race off Marblehead today in which the sloops Avenger, owned by C. K. Cummings and the Shimna, owned by R. T. Paine, 2d, are entered, a class having been provided for these fast yachts.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

THE CHICAGO CUBS HAVE OFFERED $10,000 for Outfielder Jimmy Kane of the Montreal League club, but Manager Joe Tinker has a chance to bid on him. Kane is twenty-two years old.

HANS SAUNDERS, THE YOUNG HOLY Cross player who was given a trial by the Chicago Nationals, is believed to be one of the big show yet. Hank O'Day, scout, reported that Saunders has a world of speed, but needs batting day, judging by the way he struck into the air.

THE RED SOX HAVE FOUR GAMES IN Philadelphia and three in Washington before their return to the Fenway on July 2. The White Sox will open the big series.

IT WON'T BE LONG BEFORE THIS Speaker is up among the batting select. Tris is batting in the .300 class and other fine hitting days, and what's more he's making his hits count.

IF A PERMANENT INJUNCTION is granted restraining Manager Joe Tinker, Manager Moran, the United States District Court issues, and the Cubs and Chicago Whale start for return to his home in Herman, he declares, and Reserve will play baseball. The sets he will never play in Cincinnati again.

BILL SWEENEY IS DUE FOR A REST. Manager Schmidt of the Boston Nationals admits that the youngster has the possibility of a career in store for him.

CLAUDE COOPER, TOUTED SO HIGHLY by John McGraw, is not living up to the reputation the Giant chief made for him. Cooper attributes his poor pitching to a sore arm.

JOHN M. WARD SAYS O.R. HAS NO INtention of starting another league, and Reserve stalwart is hardly Joe Tinker and Joe Kelley for a while.

BRANCH RICKEY IS GOING TO IMITATE Connie Mack the rest of the season. That is Branch will not reach the team as in the past, but will leave that to the players.

BAUMGARTNER, WHO HAS BEEN THE mainstay of the University of Chicago baseball team, will be given a trial by the Philadelphia Nationals. He is a left-hander. He has no other year in college.

HANS WAGNER'S BATTING SLUMP OF the last two weeks has pushed him out of his accustomed place among the .300 hitters of the National League.

BRAVES PLAY FINAL GAME WITH GIANTS

The Braves have come back into their own and today finds the Stallings crew down in last place again, the result of the Giants' double victory yesterday, but there is another game on this afternoon and the Braves are determined to get back at McGraw and his New Yorkers.

Penalties imposed by Umpire Rigler early in the opening game so weakened the Braves that they were in no condition to make any sort of a fight, and they fell easy victims to the onslaughts of McGraw's men.

There was one of the most noisy demonstrations of disapproval of an umpire seen in many a day.

The feature of the double-header was the wonderful outfielding of Bescher in both games and his stickwork in the first game.

Joe Connolly did some good hitting, getting a home run in each of the games, as well as other hits.

Yankees Need Real Sluggers for Brace

"If I just had a couple of real sluggers on my team, I'd be up there fighting for the pennant."

So says Frank Chance, the erstwhile Peerless Cub leader, who is here with his New York Yankees trying his best to keep the club out of the American League cellar.

"I'm satisfied with my team only as a defensive aggregation. The players are a bunch of good fielders They are also able to use good judgment on the bases, but we need hitters badly.

"My team improved 100 per cent. this season over last year, but the race we haven't been able to make the good showing is because the other clubs improved even more."

Germans to Compete in Davis Cup Match

BERLIN, June 27.—The German Tennis Association decided, almost at the last hour, to participate in this year's contest for the Davis cup, this was won by Americans in England last year. The German masters of tennis, Froitzheim, Kleinschroth and Rahe, will go to America to take part in the contest.

RED SOX END SERIES TODAY WITH YANKS

NEW YORK, June 27.—Bill Carrigan is nearly happy today following the Red Sox 2 to 1 ten inning victory over the Yankees yesterday and the only thing remaining to complete his happiness is for the Boston boys to repeat today in their final game of the series with the Chancemen.

Young Coumbe was on the rubber for Boston and made a great showing for seven innings, when he was taken out for a pinch hitter and Dutch Leonard finished the last three innings in his best form.

Fisher pitched a grand game for the home team and only for a wild pitch in the tenth Boston would not have scored the winning run in that stanza.

Mack Would Have Senators' Leader Expelled from Game

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—As a result of yesterday's mixup, in which the Senators forfeited the first game of the double-header with the Athletics, Connie Mack today bitterly denounced Clark Griffith and expressed the opinion that "Grif" should be expelled from baseball.

The trouble culminates a long strife between the Washington and Philadelphia clubs. It is said, indeed, that Washington is the one team with which the White Elephants really scrap.

Coast Poloists Want Chance in Big Play

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—California polo players are eager for the opportunity to prove their ability in actual competition with the Big Four, or any other Eastern cracks, according to Reginald Weir, one of the most prominent Pacific coast players.

"The only way to determine whether supremacy rests with the East or West is by holding a series of real matches," he said. "When the Easterners come to the San Francisco exposition for the proposed tournament, we will be there all right and will give them a rub. We will find out then whether the best players come from the East or West."

BIKERS BATTLE AT BEACH FOR DIDIER MATCH

RACING PROGRAM.

Motor-paced race, Clarence Carman, Jamaica; Elmer Collins, Lynn; George Wiley, Syracuse; Percy Lawrence, San Francisco.

Two-mile amateur handicap, Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open for amateurs, one-mile invitation for amateurs, one-mile professional and three novice events.

George Wiley, the American champion; Clarence Carman of Jamaica, L. I.; Elmer Collins of Lynn, and Percy Lawrence of San Francisco, a quartet of the fastest paced men in the game today, meet tonight in a twenty-five mile motor-paced race at the Revere Cycle track.

This race will be preceded by a long list of amateur, professional and novice races, which promise to be more keenly contested than ever because of the banding together of the Boston and Providence riders entered.

Three of the four riders in the motor paced race are seeking a match race with Leon Didier, the French champion, and will strive their hardest to win.

Wiley was to have ridden Didier a month ago, but was injured the night before the event was scheduled to take place. If he continues his present clip it is more than probable that he will be matched with Didier in the near future.

Carman is also angling for another chance with Didier. The Frenchman beat Carman at the Beach a week ago, but the latter says he was away off form at the time.

Collins has carefully groomed himself for this race. The Lynn favorite has absented himself from the racing game for the past few weeks with hope of rounding back into his old form and he now believes he is riding as fast as he ever did.

Chance Didn't Get 'Stung' After All

CLEVELAND, O., June 27.—When Frank Chance traded Hal Chase to the White Sox for Babe Borton and Rollie Zeider, the critics in Chicago laughed in their sleeves. Jimmy Callahan also chuckled as he signed the papers. The veteran baseball general when Borton failed utterly as the Yankees' first baseman and Zeider's batting put him among the count. In discussing Chase's flop to the Federals, Chance asked, "Who's loony now?"

Baseball Receipts Fall Off Heavily

CHICAGO, June 27.—Baseball gate receipts have fallen off heavily and three major leagues this year will make less money than two did last year. This statement was made by Charles A. Comiskey, president of the Chicago American club. Comiskey declared that the public was weary of the wrangilngs and contract jumping talk and that the high salaries on salaries which had thrown into the background the sporting features of the pastime.

Boxing Added to Olympic Program

PARIS, June 27.—France's proposal that boxing be permitted at the Olympic games in Berlin in 1916 has been adopted by the International Olympic Congress. The series of competitions is to include eight categories of boxers, from flyweight to heavyweight. A sub-committee was appointed to settle the rules and regulations for the contests.

Short Ship Race Favorites Beaten

HAVERHILL, June 27.—John R. Hall and Bert Clark, the favorites, were defeated in the 2:16 pacing event on the Short Ship program. Troas, a big bay gelding from the Fatherland Farm, taking first money.

Margaret Druin of the Cox stables had little trouble in taking the 2:23 trot after Bronson had won the first heat.

The 2:30 trot required five heats, Betsy Ringen, the favorite, owned by N. Tallman of Boston, winning.

COLUMBIA WON BY ROWING AS WE PLANNED

—JAMES RICE.

By JAMES RICE,
Coach Winning Columbia Crew.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 27.—Columbia rowed them into the ground. Not once after the two-mile mark had been passed, and I saw that my varsity crew was right there in the van, did I have any doubts at all as to their ability to cross the finish line in the lead.

We rowed the race according to schedule and I must say that McCarthy is one of the grandest strokes that ever sat in a Columbia shell.

The crew rowed from start to finish just as we had mapped out, and I know that when Cornell was on even terms at the bridge we would have little difficulty in sewing by as hard as we pleased. McCarthy timed the final sprint for the psychological moment.

I am glad for Vivian Nickalls and Pennsylvania that the Quaker crew was able to come through and upset all the calculations of the experts. Their pins or no their pins the Quakers rowed a game race, and I must confess that they had more in them than I had imagined. It did not seem to me after they had rowed the first three miles and were right there, that they would be able to last through to the finish. That they did is all the more to their credit and to the credit of Nicholls.

The Cornell crew seemed to me very bit as good an eight as Courtney has put on the river in years, but they did not have it in them to beat old Columbia. Cornell rowed itself to the very last notch, and I do not think that they had as much in them as they imagined they had before the race.

Courtney's crew rowed a powerful stroke and gave us very hit as hard a race as we had expected. My greatest pleasure is the realization that every one must admit that Columbia's crews are not three-mile crews.

Syracuse rowed a disappointing race and I am sorry that Harry Vall's lusty eight did not make a better showing. Syracuse had a lot of powerful men in the shell and should have done better, while Washington rowed just about true to form.

Ever since the race at Princeton I have been convinced that we would make everybody move pretty fast at Poughkeepsie, and my hunch wasn't far wrong.

I think I can say without fear of contradiction that the Columbia eight is about the fastest crew in America today, and my only regret is that we are not going to the English Henley.

That man McCarthy can make the crew go to forty strokes to the minute for a mile, and we have rowed a couple of fast short distance trials here on the Hudson in the last three weeks.

JOHNSON RULES FAVORITE OVER PITTSBURGH HOPE IN BIG BOUT TONIGHT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

EXPERTS DECLARE MORAN HAS AN EVEN CHANCE OF DEFEATING NEGRO

JOHNSON AND MORAN BOTH READY FOR TITLE BATTLE TONIGHT

NEGRO IS MADE 10 6 FAVORITE

By WM. MULDOON,
American Greatest Physical Conditioner.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The white man has his first real opportunity tonight to get possession of the heavyweight championship in the boxing profession.

Moran is a fine specimen of manhood, blessed with a magnificent, well-proportioned physique, intelligent, level-headed, good habits and above the average as a creditable representative of the American professional athlete. He should win in this contest.

There are, of course, a few "ifs," taking it for granted the match is honest.

The first if—Is he in the best condition possible?

If number two—Will he refrain from clinching, wrestling and shoving about the ring, thereby tiring his arms and playing into the very opportunities that his opponent is looking for?

JOHNSON'S CLINCH TRICK.

Johnson's greatest skill has been displayed in his ability to injure his opponent while in the clinches. He is very strong in the arms and shoulders.

He manages to get a hold of his opponent's wrists or forearms while in the clinches and twists and pushes them around to his back, compelling his rival to use strength in forcing his arms, and while he is engaged in that effort and his attention is attracted in that direction Johnson slips his body just far enough from his opponent to allow room for his right arm shooting up between them and catching his opponent under the chin or on the jaw with terrific force, and before the victim has time to recover from that jolt he brings in a short left-handed hook.

TRAP SET FOR MORAN.

Of course, Moran and his seconds must know this as well as anyone else who ever saw Johnson fight and; therefore, they should avoid being drawn into such a trap.

This is the first time that Johnson has had an opponent with equal chances from a physical point of view. Reports from France inform us that Johnson looks as well as he ever did in his life, and we have no reason to doubt the truth of this report, but the most important thing regarding his ability to stand the hardships of a fight is not apparent and cannot be seen by looking at the man, nor by watching him in his exercises of training.

It is his nerve energy, which must come from his nerve organism, and it is almost a certainty that in his case there will be no exception.

His deficiency will not be for the want of muscular strength nor knowledge of the game, but will his nervous organism stand the shock and strain of a severe contest.

REAL MATCH FOR NEGRO.

It is my opinion that it will not. It would be contrary to nature. Johnson at his best undoubtedly had the best judgment of time and distance of any pugilist I ever saw excepting, perhaps, Peter Jackson.

Now then, all boxers know that it is necessary to keep right at the game in order to retain that good judgment of time and distance.

All men lose it more or less through want of practice and through careless, indifferent boxing, such as is followed in exhibition and training circles.

There is no reason to believe that Johnson is an exception. He has not faced on his merits a clever or even moderately clever boxer in years, and he has not had a real athlete to contend against since he fought Burns in Australia.

If Johnson defeats Moran in this bout it will be by far the most creditable performance of his entire pugilistic career.

MORAN'S BACKERS BETTING ON HUNCH

NEW YORK, June 27—In spite of the fact that the big battle is only a few hours away, betting on the Johnson-Moran fight is pretty brisk at the various hotels, with the colored champion the favorite at odds of 10 to 4.

There are a lot of birds willing to wager a few iron men that it's time for Johnson to flop, and are betting on the hunch rather than the merits of the men.

William A. Brady, former manager of both Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries, is an ardent Moran admirer and is writing back daily, telling the fans that Moran is a cinch.

Mr. Brady thinks that the time has come for a new champ and that this is the time. He says that Johnson at thirty-six is too old to defend his title, therefore Moran is a cinch.

He adds that twenty different men could have licked Sullivan when Corbett turned the trick; that twenty different men could have licked Corbett when Fitzsimmons caught him in that nervous state; that twenty different men could have beaten Fitzsimmons when Jeffries did, and that twenty different men could have licked Jeffries at Reno the day Johnson won.

HOW MORAN DOPES FIGHT.

We agree to that, kind sir, BUT all the winners of those fights proved themselves to be great fighters.

They were first-class men, were Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries and Johnson. We can't say the same of Moran. All of the former showed great promise before they won their titles, whereas Moran is an ordinary man facing and extraordinary one.

Moran is surely a confident young fellow. He has written a series of articles for a London weekly called Boxing. The following is a bit of the stuff he came across with in one of his most recent articles. Give it the up and down:

If you subject the matter to a close analysis, you'll see I'm right. I'm not the one to worry. Let Mr. Johnson do that.

I am just coming up toward the top, and I feel that when the test comes I'll be far better than ever before.

Johnson has been at the top and he knows that his best time has passed. He'll fear that he may not do as well as he used to when the big test comes.

MORAN ALWAYS CONFIDENT.

A champion worries when he goes into a fight, because he's had all the good things, and he's afraid he may lose them. The time is getting short, and everywhere Mr. Johnson goes now he's surrounded by hosts of little Tom Powers' Glooms.

They sit in his limousine when he thinks he may have to lose it when he's down and out. They're sitting in his closet and under his bed. My room is full of little Joys. There isn't a Gloom in sight.

Surely feel as confident as I sound. There isn't a doubt but I'll come home champion of the world. I've made up my mind that nothing can stop me, and that I'm going to tear into Johnson until he cracks.

He'll fight hard for seven or eight rounds. He can do that on form. Then he'll begin to weaken and lose his speed, and I'll be going harder every minute.

Even if he should get to me at the start, I can protect myself for a moment and then come back as strong as ever.

Bantam Champion Would Meet Kilbane

The bantamweight limit as it has stood for years is good enough for the new title holder, Kid Williams.

"A lot of people expected me to change the weight, like Ritchie did," said Williams, "but I am going to foot them. The old 116 pounds ringside is good enough for me, and all my matches will be made at that figure."

Before heading for New Orleans, where the champion is scheduled to meet Kid Herman on July 4, Manager Harris stated:

"After meeting all the good bantams the champion will step up and look a few featherweights. We will bar nobody, not even Kilbane, asking only that the feathers do 122 ringside for Williams, who, at the most, will never weigh over 118 pounds.

Henigan Winner of Maine Marathon

James Henligan, formerly of the North Dorchester A. A., ex-champion ten-mile runner of New England, running unattached, won the modified marathon from Orono to Bangor in 47 minutes and 24 seconds. Frank Mitchell of the Indian Island A. A., a Carlisle runner, was second.

New Shamrock Easy Winner in Real Race

TORQUAY, Eng., June 27.—Shamrock IV., Sir Thomas Lipton's new challenger for the America cup, had her first real official trial under cup conditions here when she beat the old Shamrock over a 17-mile course by 4m. 53s., elapsed time.

The corrected time was estimated at about a minute and a half.

Shamrock IV. had reversed to her sloop rig and both yachts carried Jack yarders. The challenger was steered by William P. Burton and crossed the starting line one second after the gun was fired at 1:15. The trial boat followed 58 seconds later.

Munice Is Winner Over Meyers in 7th

Johnny Munice defeated Henry Meyers at the University A. C., Cambridge, in the seventh round. Meyers seconds throwing up the sponge. The 12-round bout between Walter Butler of Revere and Eddie Flynn of Lynn was fast and hot from the start.

Butler got the decision at the end of the bout and he earned it.

Eddie Brown was given the decision on a foul over Dave Powers in the second round.

FIGHTING POSE OF RING RIVALS.

Johnson and Moran are both "stand-up" boxers, as shown by Tad. Neither man uses the crouch position made famous by Jeffries, but take the old stand used by every schoolboy when "putting up his dukes."

JOHNSON.

The negro champion is set ready to stab with either hand and get away without return or take the blow while retreating and in no danger.

MORAN.

The Pittsburgh white hope is a slugger and his position shows him ready to swap punches with the colored titleholder.

Easy Victory for Me in 12 Rounds, Champion Claims

By JACK JOHNSON

I am going to win and expect to play havoc in the first round proving to Moran what he is up against. I shall not be in a hurry to finish him, but I don't think the fight will last more than twelve rounds.

If I don't win this fight it won't be my fault, nor will I have anything to complain of. I am not going to lose any chance, and the fight is going to be mine.

Moran Has Good Chance to Win Title, Says Corbett

NEW YORK, June 27.—"Of course everybody seems to think Johnson is all in. I don't know how far gone he is and I have never seen Moran box but, judging from what I have heard of Moran, he is a strong young fellow with very little experience," said James J. Corbett today.

"Somehow he thinks Johnson is due to be licked and feels that any strong young fellow with lots of courage, who can stand a beating for a few rounds can make Johnson tired and beat him.

"Well, if that can be done, I rather think Moran is the man to do it.

"Now, Johnson, if he gets tired, will try to kid and bull his way through the twenty rounds. Smiling, and with his knowledge of the ring, he might make Moran think he is as good as ever. I would give my right arm to see Moran win, because it would help boxing a lot.

"However, on form Johnson should win, but from what I hear, Johnson won't be in the best of form.

"If Moran will just cut loose and keep up a fast pace and make Johnson fight every second and have the referee break them away quickly, that's Moran's only chance."

Columbia Wins Big College Crew Race

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 27.—Columbia won the four-mile varsity eight-oared race, the feature event of the annual intercollegiate regatta. Pennsylvania was second, Cornell third, Syracuse fourth, Washington fifth and Wisconsin last.

Columbia won by a length and a half over Pennsylvania.

The official times: Columbia 19:27 4-5; Pennsylvania, 19:41; Cornell, 19:44 1-5; Syracuse, 19:59 2-5; Washington, 20:01 2-5; Wisconsin, 20:20.

Cornell won the first event of the day, the junior race, Columbia was second, Penn third and Syracuse fourth. The time was 17:15 2-5.

Cornell repeated its victory in the freshman race.

JACK JOHNSON PICKED TO WIN OUT BY CONWAY

By JACK CONWAY.

JACK JOHNSON is our choice in the big championship battle in Paris tonight. We believe that the champion's experience, skill, underful strength and knowledge of the ring game will enable him to win from Moran. We think that he will stop Moran inside of the limit as he will not want to take any chances of the Pittsburgh "white hope" wearing him down in a long fight. It would not surprise us much if Johnson should stop his opponent in eleven or twelve rounds.

MORAN'S supporters believe that the champion's condition will cause his downfall. Johnson naturally is not as good a fighter as he was four years ago, but he probably still knows enough about the ring game in order to defeat a heavyweight of Moran's limited experience.

JACK BRITTON is preparing for a ring campaign which he feels confident will terminate in his winning the world's lightweight championship. The Chicago ring wizard has few equals and there are many close followers of the boxing game who believe that he would have an excellent chance to win from Willie Ritchie.

Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight, recently bested the lightweight champion in a ten-round encounter, in Milwaukee, and if the referee could have rendered a decision the Windy City boy would today be parading around with the lightweight title safely tucked away in his vest pocket.

Britton fought White in New Orleans last Fourth of July and won a knockout in nineteen rounds. He made 133 pounds for White. This is the real lightweight limit, but Ritchie has been fighting at 135 pounds in his recent tussles within the ropes.

JACK is well known to Boston "fans" as he has engaged in two bouts in this city. He knocked out Eddie Murphy of South Boston in eleven rounds at the Arena, on August 27, 1912, while he won on a foul in six rounds from "Young" Saylor of Indianapolis in the same ring on September 17, 1912.

Britton's next bout will be with Matty Baldwin of Charlestown and will be staged before the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. Britton says that if he is successful in his encounter with Baldwin he will go to Australia where he will be able to make a big pot of money and at the same time get in line for a match with Ritchie provided that the latter is successful in his bout with Freddy Welsh in London.

BALDWIN believes that he will upset Britton's plans. He is familiar with the latter's style of fighting and is confident that he will breeze in a winner next Tuesday. Britton usually relies upon his speed and footwork in order to win his bouts within the hemp ropes. Baldwin, however, says that he will keep forcing the fighting and in this way prevent the Chicago boy from calling into play his ring science. Matty says that the bout will be a repetition of the Gallant-Murphy contest in which a rugged fighter beat a clever boxer.

Kirby May Join Braves.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 27.—Larue Kirby, sensation of the Southern League, may play with the Boston Nationals. He has been offered to that club, it is understood. Kirby is hitting for .346. The Chicago Cubs are trying to land the player.

Certain of Win Within 15 Rounds, Challenger Says

By FRANK MORAN.

I am certain of victory within 15 rounds at the outside. I am not making this statement lightly, fully realizing that I have to face it after the fight. I have never trained so thoroughly and conscientiously before and my physical condition was never finer.

My strength, speed and stamina are all at the utmost point of efficiency and to my mind it is a foregone conclusion that I will be the world's champion tonight.

EXPERTS LEAN TO MORAN

a full minute and then almost defiantly replied:

"I am going to win, sure."

"Would you like me to say how many rounds the fight will go?" I asked. "The reply came more quickly:

"I will knock him out," he said, "in the twelfth round."

"Just long enough," I suggested, "to make the moving pictures valuable, eh?"

"I need the money, Mr. Brady," replied Johnson.

It took me an hour and a half of traveling in an automobile at better than fifty miles an hour to reach Moran's camp.

If environ means anything Moran must romp in the winner. Only southern California can begin to compare with the glories of the little valley on Olse River, where Moran's training quarters have been pitched.

When our party landed on the opposite shore of the quarters Moran came jumping down the path, shouting like an unscrubbed school boy. As he came he pulled the grey sweater he was wearing over his head and flung it into the air. His upper body looked about as yielding as the gun turret of a battleship.

In all my experience I have never seen a more magnificent specimen of prfect condition than Moran's. He did not want to talk. His deep interest lay in hearing about his friends in New York and what the public thought of his chances.

When I pinned him down this is all he would say: From the time I made up my mind to become a fighter, I've had just exactly one idea in my head—that the game is no good unless you're at the top.

I did not challenge Johnson to gain only money and temporary fame, I mean preliminary notoriety. I challenged Johnson because I thought I could whip him. Today I kn'w I not only can whip him but I shall whip him.

A Bachelor's Diary

He Makes His First Sale and Celebrates It Under Embarrassing Conditions

By MAX

MAY 29. — This afternoon I made a sale of bonds. As far as I can remember this is the first thing in life I have put through by sheer force of work and effort. I sold two $500 bonds to Colonel Gregory, who was quite determined not to buy, and who assured me that I was a real salesman when I had persuaded him that he had a $1,000 fairly crying to be invested in the particular bonds that Sidney Darrow & Co.'s salesman, Max, handles.

Two per cent. on one thousand is twenty—and that little sum represents my earnings over and above my salary for my first week of work. In future I shall save my "extras" until I have enough to start myself in business. Though I must confess that day seems sadly remote to the beginner at thirty-eight!

Friend Diary, I hope you will approve of what I am going to do with the fruits of my first sale. Ten dollars will send Manette to the country over Memorial Day. One of her little school mates is taking my niece home for a visit. I saw the two children off at 4 today. Manette carried a big box of chocolates to her little friend's mother, and in the more big bag were a $5 bill and her return ticket. The two girls were fairly fluttering with excitement over the good times their "week-end" was to hold.

I am blessing the sale that came just at the right moment to permit me to give Manette this little outing and to start her off with a bit of return attention to her hostess.

It seems queer to think that I shall be spending the holiday in town. Guy Nox. — II suggested a trip to the Berkshires and Allen Harding asked me down to his place on the Sound, but I told them both that I had other plans.

I wonder if they couldn't guess that the "other plans" were not to strain my slim finances unduly!

May 31—Two holidays in succession should be prohibited. Two successive days without work are two too many for any but the man who owns a yacht of a car—and all days are holidays to him anyway.

Jove, but yesterday dragged!

No one I knew in my days of affluence was likely to be in town. So even at my lonesomest moment I dreaded the humiliation of telephoning and being told by some supercilious man-servant who probably knows all about the failure I made of T. & Co. that his master was out of town for the holidays.

A LONG DAY

At six I weakened and called Sally, but she had motored down to the shore with a party.

I had filled up my morning with a walk and the afternoon was devoted to going over some papers. But I fairly dreaded the long evening alone. So I dressed and went to a table d'hote and then took in a motion picture, and walked home.

The street held a stream of humanity, but I felt desperately alone. I was glad to get back to my room. My books and pictures and your dark green covers had a look of welcome and friendly greeting. But I couldn't tell you how I felt them, Diary. It all hurt too poignantly to write about.

This morning I woke with a ghastly feeling that here was another day to be gotten rid of. I went out for a walk at ten and dreaded the loneliness so that I went to Revere. When I got home at six I found that Sally had phoned just after I went out and had left an urgent message that if I got back any time before three I should come right over, as a fleeting party was taking the steamboat to Nantasket and wanted me to join the merrymaking.

It seems a bit malicious of Fate to have started me off on a lonely tramp just early enough to miss a little fun that was well within the reach of my lean purse.

You and my Pipe must be my consolation tonight, Friend—and tomorrow—praise be to the calendar that does not include triple alliance of holidays—I go back to work.

Manette returns Tuesday afternoon. I must manage to get in a bit of enjoyment tomorrow so that I will not meet her in a morbid frame of mind that will spoil the memory of her good times. It is not well for a failure to have too much time to think of his own weaknesses.

There is ten dollars remaining from the commission on my first sale. It will not afford taxis and orchids—but it will reserve me a table for two in a cool restaurant and it will purchase a dinner that won't disgrace an ex-millionaire and still leave a fair tip for the waiter.

I'll telephone to the Valthrope tomorrow morning and reserve my favorite table. And then to decide on my companion! Shall I ask Sally, or merely phone her for Josephina's address and try to persuade my old love to have the little tete-a-tete that I feel it is inevitable we must have some day?

Tomorrow shall decide.

June 1—This has been an eventful day, Friend Diary.

When I got into the trolley I found the pretty stenographer of Darrow & Co. standing on the platform.

"Good morning, Mr. Max. Glad to get into harness again after the holiday?" asked she.

CONGENIAL AS WELL

That made me feel at once that I should find her congenial and clever as well as pretty. The average woman would have said, "Sorry that the holiday is over?" if I liked her better than ever when I found that she had not done anything particularly exciting, but had taken the day to help her mother fashion the simple little gray charmeuse dress she was wearing.

Her name I found was Marian Church. Pretty old-fashioned name that, and it goes delightfully with that graceful and well-bred prettiness.

We visited all the way to the office, and suddenly I began to wonder if I dared ask this beautiful young girl to dine with me at the Valthorpe.

There was a time when I would have expected a stenographer, however pretty and refined, to fairly beam with delight at the thought of an invitation from Max of the Millions. Now I hardly dared venture my invitation. I thought it over all morning, and finally, when I saw Miss Church putting on her hat at the noon hour, I went up to her with the best assumption of boldness I could muster.

"Do you feel charitably inclined toward a lonely man?" I asked.

"What does he need?" said the pretty little clicker of keys, with a dazzlingly sweet smile that was made up of equal parts of rose lips, magnolia teeth and great, deep, ox-heart cherry eyes.

"Some one to go to dinner with him and make him forget how lonely he is," said I.

She looked a bit troubled. "What can I do?"

"Come with me." I found myself begging.

"If you'd come and call first and meet my mother, Mr. Max—I think I could go," she said with shy dignity.

"But the dinner's tonight. I phoned for the table this morning. I've been trying to get up courage to ask you till now, and if you refuse I'll just have to cancel the table and let the head waiter know what an unpopular creature I am. Won't you come—please?"

Miss Church considered me gravely for a minute or two.

"I'll come," she said at last simply.

I decided at once that some of those pink flushed yellow Lady Ward roses would go well with the grey dress, and I ordered them for her place at the table.

Marian Church was the prettiest girl at the Valthorpe. And she has a simple self-possession of manner that makes you proud to be seen with her.

I began to wonder where I could send Manette over the next holiday. I felt that it would not be lonely.

Just as we were finishing our dinner—I with a white creme de menthe frappe and Marian with some peppermint disike—there was a great commotion at the next table.

The waiter ushered in a party of eight of my old friends. Sally and Guy Norwell faced us.

I was glad to pay our check and leave.

(In the next installment Max tells of his week-end visit to Sally's country home.

"The End of the Trail"

THE end of the trail in more ways than one—where the brown earth and the blue of Paradise meet—where the road leaps into the land of WHITHER?—and the signboard says "They lived happily ever after!"—NELL BRINKLEY.

THE YELLOW TICKET

"It is quite fortunate tonight that the doors are locked. But for that inconvenience you would have left me in anger. I should have been sorry for that—and on second thoughts—so would you. For you would never have understood how fully I am your friend. Why, knowing how—members of your race are likely to prefer a life of obscurity to all else I have even thought that after today—tomorrow—perhaps, there will be Mr. Julian Rolfe waiting for you."

The Baron went on lightly, easily. A gentleman prevents a scene with graceful tact, for it is the heritage of manhood to detest "scenes."

"And you said you would help me" said Anna Mirrel.

Her voice was very low, for she was frozen by fear. Suddenly the bonds of her terror burst and tears burned their salty course unheeded down her blazing cheeks.

"I trusted you. I came here to seek—sanctuary," sobbed the girl.

"You will find your sanctuary. Only we shall save much time and trouble by taking this short cut."

"Don't! Don't, it is too hideous!" screamed the girl hysterically.

And now she buried her head in her arms and sobbed wildly. If only she might wake up in her room in the Karen Skyer and find it all a bad dream. If only it were all a nightmare!

This hysteria irked the Baron. After all this Jewess was a most unimportant little creature and the head of the Okrana was free to do with her as he would—and without the tedium of heroics and boresome argument. She overrated her importance in the scheme of things. Well, Baron Aldrey would make her position quite clear.

SPOKE HARSHLY

He spoke barely now. "Anna Mirrel, I had tried to avoid the ugly side of your position—which you seem to have forgotten. Suppose I open that door and let you out. Into the great city tonight? As the holder of a Yellow Ticket—you go to what? You can no more escape that a Yellow Ticket than you can escape—from me—and this room. I have shown you a means to an end. You come of a race that is not slow to avail itself of the advantages offered to it. I count on this trait of Jewish character to bring you to a proper frame of mind. Your people—and the women of your people—always make the best of a bargain—Anna Mirrel."

The girl lifted her head from her tiseling arms as he spoke. She looked at him dully, as if she were trying to find some idea that was buried in the mass of his words. She seemed to be seeking—seeking some elusive idea. But as he went on pronouncing sentence of her doom, her face changed again to a sort of dull apathy of fear.

"Do you realize that I am paying you a compliment by reasoning with you, my girl? I am going to put on a smoking jacket, pardon."

The Baron closed the doors of his private apartments after him. But Anna could hear him softly humming, "Un Peu D'Amour," as he moved about his room.

She sat quite still for a moment with that frozen horror of fear still in her eyes. In all the wild phantasm of terror that clutched its creaking way across her heart one thought came and went again before she had known it fully. To die? She was so young to die—and Jews do not shirk the life their Maker has given them to live. If only it were a bad dream! If only she might wake—safe in her own little room!

Anna's fingers slid across the polished top of the Baron's teakwood table—his amorous voice floated out to her muffled in the thick accents of his emotion. A wild distaste crossed her face. It was followed by the most vindictive hatred. She had come there—as to a friend. She had come for sanctuary. Her face hardened. She rose and walked to the couch and sted there for a moment thinking deeply. Then she seemed fairly to toss off one mood and to summon another as if she were changing her dress. She sank into a corner of the deep divan. Anna Mirrel had found her way. Her eyes burned alive again in a death-white face. Her body was tense and instinct with purpose.

The Baron came noiselessly into the room and stood watching the fireflight shadows on his young guest's dusky hair. All the hysteria seemed past. She would not make a scene after all. The Baron was glad. He must be getting old, he reflected. He no longer enjoyed landing a gamey fish that had to be played the full length of the line—and yet there had been a day when trout fishing in Scottish streams had thrilled his young blood. His blood was older and more sluggish now—it needed "Wine, Woman and Song."

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed by Absorption

An undue Summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, dust or grease, often freckles, too, it is more sensible to remove such surface than to hide it with cosmetics. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercolized wax, which absorbs the surface as it gradually peels away. The skin turns as rosy-cheeked as a child's—absorbed, gently, by degrees. There's no inconvenience, so do tention indoors. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face, at bedtime and wash it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercolized wax at the druggists, use for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you. Remove them by using a solution of powdered saxolite. Get a dissolved in ½ oz. witch hazel. Used daily for awhile this will be found wonderfully effective. ADVERTISEMENT.

"Well, well! Are we sensible now?" His voice sounded like that of a master approving a refractory pupil who had decided to behave.

"Oh, yes," said Anna Mirrel lightly, for all the sob that caught in her throat before her voice would come. "It would be very foolish to be anything else when facing 'the inevitable'—wouldn't it?"

"Very foolish! My, but we're quiet! What's working in the back of that pretty little head?" and Baron Andrey put his hand under a white chin and forced Anna to face him and see the back of the settee. The firelight glow showed a tear-flushed, but smiling face.

CHAPTER ONE.

A Chain of Incidents

SARAH HAMILTON had been brought up from here early childhood in the country of the man-eating tiger. She could hunt with the endurance of the strongest man and usually accompanied her father on nearly all of his hunting expeditions, but she had one terrible fault. Probably due to the fact that she was motherless, she could not control her temper.

Her father was one of the wealthiest men in Calcutta, and she had never been denied anything since the time when her mother died leaving behind her a tiny baby girl. George Hamilton had never been able to deny Sarah anything, simply because she was the only thing he had to love in all the world.

On one of their hunting expeditions in the wilds of India, George Hamilton had come across a tiny native maid one morning just as he and Sarah were about to start for the jungle. She tagged at his coat as though to attract his attention, and then, as he smiled down at her, she dragged him after her into one of the squalid huts where the figure of a woman lay motionless upon the bed. The child ran over to the cot and roughly kissed the calm face upon the pillow and Hamilton, following her to the bed, started back as he touched the woman's icy hand. She was dead and this tot was alone in the world.

"Father, aren't you coming?" said Sarah petulantly from the door. "What on earth are you doing in this awful place?" And then as her father pointed gravely to the silent figure on the bed she shrugged her shoulders and observed:

A HEARTLESS REMARK

"Call some one in and have her taken away," she said heartlessly. "Why need we bother our heads about her? She might have died of fever, and here we are lingering in this damp, dirty hole."

For once, however, George Hamilton did not heed his beautiful spoiled daughter. He was on his knees before the native girl who hardly understood that her mother had left her forever.

"How would you like to come home with me, little girl?" he asked, smiling kindly at the perplexed face. And that was the way that little Aissa came to be a member of the Hamilton household.

Ten years had rolled their weary length around and Sarah Hamilton was still the most beautiful girl in Calcutta and the one most sought after. Little Aissa had become her special waiting maid and many blows and much ill treatment fell to her lot constantly. Her beautiful mistress was forever taking out of her little maid her fits of ill humor and Aissa's life was not strewn with roses.

Sarah was on the point of accepting an offer of marriage from Dr. Carruthers, a young physician in town, but her uncertain temper made it almost impossible for her to decide on any one man. One morning as she called at the doctor's office to take him driving with her, she turned to Aissa, who had followed her mistress into the consulting room, and would have struck her in her anger at some trivial thing if Carruthers had not interfered, and the incident ended with Sarah flying from the room in a fury.

The young doctor was young enough to be plainly disturbed. He was to have accompanied Sarah to the embassy ball that evening, and now with this coolness between them he hardly knew just what to do. He was sadly in trouble of any unnecessary thought on the subject, however, for fickle Sarah on arriving home had found a large box of fragrant, waxy blossoms waiting for her with the card of a wealthy baronet inclosed. Sir Herbert Allen, of the King's Regiment, had long been madly infatuated with the beautiful Miss Hamilton, but until lately had thought himself too old to win her hand. Now, he had thrown doubt to the winds and had decided to find out for certain whether or not he had any chance with the girl.

SHE REFLECTS

Sarah reflected for a long time as she bent over the exquisite flowers. Sir Herbert Allen was a good looking, but he was wealthy and would be a great catch. She would write and tell Carruthers that she could not go with him that evening, and then she would slip out and go with Allen, and this tot was about to give her a chance to spend all the time she wanted with the Baronet.

The Difference in Sex

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

WHEN a man keeps a scrapbook the clippings are all about himself.

But Mother's are all about her children, her husband, her friends and her kin.

When a little girl and her brother go for a walk, he is never so young nor so small that his nose doesn't turn up at everything that excites her admiration.

An he keeps his nose turned up at what a woman admires all through life, till the undertaker finally pulls it down.

A man always looks the same, but if you see a woman at church one day and doing her washing the next day you will declare it is not the same woman.

When a man is invited out to dinner he has his best time at the table, but a woman has her best time in telling about it next day.

The curiosity a woman feels about the way a man spends his time, he feels about the way she spends his money.

The women look for a large portion of their reward in heaven, and are satisfied, but the men want all theirs now.

When a woman shrugs her shoulders it is expressive of many things. But when a man shrugs his it means only that his back itches.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

KISSING UNDER DIFFICULTIES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen, and have been keeping company with a young man three years my senior for the past two years. Four months ago we became engaged. In a quarrel not long ago he said he thought it was proper for him to kiss me each time he entered my home, but as it happens, there always are a number of my family around, and for this and that reason I did not approve of it.

BLANCHE.

HE is an unusual young man if he wants to kiss you under such circumstances; but as your engagement sanctions such a form of greeting you should not be averse to it. That is, if you love him.

TELL HER THE NEWS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-one, and have been keeping company with a girl two months. At first she was much in love with me, but my folks were not satisfied. Some time ago I notified her about the news, and since then she does not seem as interested in me as she was at first. Now I have consulted with them, and they seem to be pleased. What can I do to regain her love as before? A. A. D.

NATURALLY she resented their attitude. Now that you have won your parents to your side, tell the girl so, and tell her speedily, before you lose her.

HE IS TRULY SMALL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a blonde, twenty-six years of age, just six feet tall and have been keeping company with a young man for the past seven years. He is also a blonde, 5 feet 4 inches. We were to be married in June, but now he tells me owing to the vast difference in our heights he can never marry me, as his friends would be ridiculing him. HEART-BROKEN.

THE physical height makes no difference, but his mental, moral and spiritual smallness make him unfit to marry any girl.

Try to forget him and the seven years wasted in his company.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were quiet today and there was no breadth to trading. Americans were irregular in London at the close. Prices were on a slightly higher level in New York at the opening and some of them made trifling gains later. At the close they were a shade below the best for the day. Business was altogether professional. The steadiness of markets, considering the untoward events of the week, continued to be a surprise. The absence of liquidation was regarded as a very encouraging indication. The scarcity of stocks at goods of covering was an important factor as regards price movements.

It was announced at Washington that there would be no decision on the Eastern freight rate cases today. While stocks were firm it would not be said that sentiment had improved any. There is still suspense as to what will be the next effect of the Claflin failure. The steel trade is still dull. The price of copper has been reduced without making a market.

At the close in New York the list was very irregular and among gains were Missouri Pacific¾. American Telephone ¾, Steel ¼ and Consolidated ¾. Canadian Pacific was off ¾, Reading ¾ and Lehigh Valley ¼. Southern Pacific, Northwestern, American Can, Northern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio and Union Pacific were unchanged. Share transactions for the session did not total 60,000.

In Boston New Haven was off ¾ and Boston & Maine unchanged, as was Adventure. United Fruit, American Telephone and Shoe shares were fractional gains. There was little business in coppers.

The New York bank statement in brief was as follows: Average statement: Excess cash $35,777,2550, decrease $3,512,600; loans decrease $1,226,000; specie decrease $7,783,000; legal tenders decrease $829,000; net deposits decrease $23,582,000; circulation decrease $78,000. Actual statement: Loans decrease $7,832,000; specie decrease $3,758,000; legal tenders decrease $6,574,000; net deposits decrease $19,996,000; reserve decrease $7,483,250.

MAY FORCE WAGE CUTTING

When James A. Patten, famous as a speculator in wheat, reached New York on his way to Chicago he spoke disparagingly of the operation of the present tariff.

"The only way," he said, "in which the American manufacturer can compete with foreign goods under this tariff is by a country-wide wage reduction. That would not only be regrettable in itself, but it would lead to a severe conflict between labor and capital."

CONGRESS WONT ADJOURN.

Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi says there is a "plutocratic press" in this country engaged in promoting sentiment in favor of adjournment by Congress without passing the anti-trust legislation which President Wilson wants. The Senator served notice on the business men of the United States that Congress would remain at its legislative job if it took all Summer. He also declared that the Claflin failure was not due to the tariff.

"Our Republican friends are attempting to attribute this business failure to the tariff," said he. "The tariff has nothing to do with it. It was simply a question of conducting an enormous business without adequate capital.

"If there is any depression," he continued, "it is due to the uncertainty of business regarding what legislation Congress will enact regulating corporations. Remove that uncertainty and business will be the better for it."

President Wilson's comment about the Claflin crash was that one failure did not constitute business depression. When asked if the government is going to investigate, he replied:

"No, what is there to investigate? Some people think that the workings of the tariff cannot be ignored, even if not investigated."

SEITS RAILROAD MEN.

It is reported from Washington that Chairman Lovett of the Union Pacific and some other leading railroad men approve of the Brandeis amendment providing for government supervision of railroad securities which the Boston attorney has offered for the bill relating to the latter. One of the provisions of the amendment makes it unlawful for any road to acquire in any way control of any other road, or boat or trolley line, unless the Interstate Commerce Commission gives its sanction to the acquisition.

PAYING WAGES AT SEA.

Regarding the new national French loan, Louis Aubert, Paris financial correspondent for Hearst newspapers, cables:

"The price of issue has been fixed at 91 per cent, giving a net yield of 3.68 and reckoning the amortization feature 4.06. This compared with 3.54 for the old perpetual three.

"This insures the success of the new loan, but shows what a sacrifice the Treasury is making to get a good send-off for its financing.

"It is a shame to think that the credit of France has come down like this. But thus are being paid the wages of sin. By sin, I mean the fiscal policies, and also the other political heresies of the radical party during the last few years."

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

A dividend of 25 per cent, the second of its size this year, has been declared by the United Cigar Stores Company of New Jersey, which is controlled by the United Cigar Stores of America.

Last year 80 per cent. of American foreign trade was carried in foreign vessels, while in June 15 per cent. of our commerce was carried in American ships.

The Pennsylvania road's rail requirements amounts to 1,57,025 tons. Of this amount 37,622 tons have been ordered, while bids have been asked upon 100,000.

Several large copper producers have reduced their asking price to 13½ cents a pound.

BOSTON AMERICAN
60 AND 62 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 27, 1914.

SALEM!—

That's the Answer to All Legislators Who Want to Vote Against the Fire Hazard Bill

The Reason Advanced by Some Senators for Their Antagonism to the Fire Hazard Bill Is Almost as Flimsy as Some of the Construction Which Menaces Life and Property in Greater Boston. WATCH This Bill, Citizens, and Watch Your Senators' Votes on It!

If the members of the Massachusetts Legislature could be taken down to Salem today there would be NO MORE TALK OF KILLING THE FIRE HAZARD BILL.

The BRICK districts of Salem are still standing, practically untouched.

In Lafayette avenue, almost wiped out at one end, legislators would note that a hundred fine old wooden houses—among the best in the city—are still standing, BECAUSE THERE WAS PLENTY OF DAYLIGHT IN BETWEEN THEM.

The House has passed the Fire Hazard bill.

The AMERICAN is informed that some men in the Senate desire to vote AGAINST the Fire Hazard bill, and that they SAY the reason is that it is going to make jobs for somebody.

Somebody should point out to these young gentlemen that in all likelihood the cost of the Fire Commissioners' office, as outlined in the Fire Hazard bill, will be more than met by the SAVING IN INSURANCE PREMIUMS.

WE ADVISE OUR FRIENDS IN THE LEGISLATURE TO VOTE FOR THE FIRE HAZARD BILL. WE ADVISE THOSE MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE WHO ARE NOT OUR FRIENDS TO SUPPORT THIS BILL.

The Fire Hazard bill establishes a Metropolitan Fire District made up of Arlington, Belmont, Boston, Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Canton, Chelsea, Cohasset, Dedham, Dover, Everett, Hingham, Hull, Lexington, Lynn, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Milton, Nahant, Needham, Newton, Quincy, Revere, Saugus, Somerville, Stoneham, Swampscott, Wakefield, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley, Weston, Westwood, Weymouth, Winchester, Winthrop and Woburn.

Salem, you will observe, was JUST ON THE EDGE OF THE DISTRICT.

Will legislators take warning from this visitation, or will they hold back on the Fire Hazard bill until a holocaust occurs on THIS side of the line?

We suggest a close examination of the makeup of the Metropolitan District as outlined. If your community is in the list, write or speak to your Senator. And do it today, NOW!

Metropolitan Boston, it is believed, suffers a greater annual loss by fire than any other district in the whole nation. The average annual loss by fire in the Metropolitan District during the last four years has been over $4,000,000. More than $3,000,000 of this loss was due to failure to take proper precaution, which ought to have been enforced by law.

FORTY-ONE HUMAN BEINGS WERE BURNED TO DEATH LAST YEAR.

Fire experts say that not a single life would have been lost if we had a proper system of regulating the fire hazards.

TWENTY-EIGHT PEOPLE WERE BURNED TO DEATH IN THE ARCADIA HOLOCAUST.

Experts say that if the Arcadia Hotel had been equipped with sprinklers not a life would have been lost there.

This condition is a serious menace to the prosperity and safety of Boston. Four million dollars loss a year, with the added high insurance rates which such extraordinary hazards necessitate, is a great load for Metropolitan Boston to carry.

All the important business, labor and insurance organizations of the district have united in support of HOUSE BILL 2636, which is calculated to bring order out of chaos in our system of fire protection.

Under the operation of this bill it is hoped and believed that 90 per cent. of the fires which occur in the district will be prevented.

The bill brings the whole district under the authority of a commissioner.

The responsibility and the power are placed in him. Now it is divided among interminable boards and commissioners, whose duties overlap and conflict and whose authority is restricted both as to territory and degree.

Boston's unenviable primacy in disasters by fire has resulted from this confusion in the regulation of our fire hazards.

The Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, the Boston Society of Architects, the Boston Central Labor Union, the Women's Trade Union League and other business organizations have done good work in their campaign for better fire protection.

MYSTERIES OF SCIENCE

Sometimes We Imagine Things Are Upside Down, When, as a Matter of Fact, They're Not

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"Please give a million readers a word-picture of the following:

"Imagine an endless railroad track encircling the earth.

"How can one conceive of a train following such a track and not being upside down when it reaches the opposite side of our globe?

"I, for one can't think of it being in any other position there."

I DON'T know why so many orderly-minded people, in an age that has invented telephones, wireless telegraphy, automobiles and flying machines, and that has hung flags on both of the Poles, should continue to befuddle their brains over the antique conundrum newly set forth above. One might suspect that the fault lay with the primary schools if one were not aware of the strange indisposition of most human beings to take into serious consideration anything so far from the ends of their noses as is the centre of the earth.

If you will simply concentrate your attention on the centre of the earth, the puzzle will undo itself like a trick knot.

What do "up" and "down" mean in ordinary everyday language? "Up" means away from the earth, toward the sky, or overhead; "down" means just the opposite, viz, toward the earth, away from the sky, or under foot.

Both are based upon common experience of what is learnedly called "gravitation," but which may more simply and picturesquely be described as falling down. Any body that is not held up will fall down toward the earth. So much we all know from infancy.

Now comes the scientific view of the matter. When a body falls down, as we say, what does it really do? It is not enough to say that it approaches the earth; if we wish to be accurate we must say that it approaches the centre of the earth. The earth is a globe, and its gravitation, or power to attract bodies toward it, is focused at its centre.

But if down means toward the earth's centre what happens when that centre is reached? Does the direction "down" continue on beyond the centre? Manifestly not, because from the very nature of a globe, all straight lines drawn from its surface to its centre must come together at the centre, and when they have reached the centre they have gone as far "down" as they can. The centre of the earth, then, is the bottom, and there can be nothing lower. "Up" means away from that centre, in any direction whatever, and "down" means toward that centre, from any direction whatever.

Up may extend to infinity, but down, counted from the earth's surface, is limited to the length of the earth's radius, about 4,000 miles.

This can be illustrated in another way. Suppose you take a string and tie a lead ball on one end. Then hold the other end in your uplifted hand. The ball will stretch the string straight toward the earth's centre, and our little apparatus becomes that very useful thing called a plumb-line.

Now imagine your arm to grow to an indefinite length, and a hole to open in the earth so that you can reach down into it and continue to suspend your plumb-line at gradually increasing depths below the surface. You can keep on reaching lower and lower, and the ball of lead will continue to hang away from you until you have stretched your arm beyond the earth's centre. Then there will come a change in the position of the ball. As long as it was between you and the centre of the earth it hung "down" (in your sense), but when the centre of the earth is between you and the ball the latter will hang "up" (in your sense), or toward you. In reality, of course, it always hangs toward the centre of the earth, and its relative change of position when it has gone beyond the centre simply shows that it has passed the bottom and is rising again.

Suppose you could drop straight through the earth, keeping your head and feet always in the same relative direction, and could come out on the other side in the presence of a pagan standing in his normal attitude.

Do you believe that you could convince him that he was up and down and that you were right end up? With your head congested with blood you would not have the impudence to try it.

Remember simply that the centre of the earth is the bottom, from whatever part of the surface it is regarded, and you will have no difficulty in perceiving that your world-encircling railroad (although it forms a ring like a caterpillar bent into a circle with all his feet on the inside) is yet, both philosophically and scientifically, right side up all the way round.

AFTER THE WEDDING

AN ILLUSTRATED STORY OF THE WAY A HOME WAS MADE

Jennie Was Gone

When Tom left their apartment, after Jennie and he had their first quarrel, his first intention was to get several good stiff drinks. After he thought it over, however, he said to himself, "that's the bunk, if I drink it won't make me feel any better; worse probably. After all, Jennie is only a young girl, and I suppose I must humor her, but she makes it awful hard sometimes."

Tom walked and walked trying to forget and trying to figure out what had come over Jennie lately and why she acted the way she did. He wandered if she had been going out with those women who lived in the same apartment house. Tom hoped she had not, for they were not the kind he wanted Jennie to associate with. Tom had asked Jennie not to go out with them, and this she had resented very much, saying she guessed she knew enough to look out for herself, and it was a whole lot better than sitting home all the time.

Tom resolved to go back home and forget all about their quarrel and apologize for being so hasty.

As Tom came in the front door he called out to Jennie, but there was no answer. He looked through all the rooms but Jennie was gone. It was getting late and he did not know where to look for her. Downstairs he met the janitor, who told him he had seen her go out with her two women acquaintances who lived upstairs.—H. C.

Kindness the Best Virtue a Woman Can Display

Parisians Seem to Think Economy the Best, with Fidelity and Modesty Next.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

THE Paris papers have been discussing the six essential virtues of woman. The result is somewhat amusing.

Economy is placed first, with 1,420 votes; fidelity and modesty each received 1,357; kindliness received 1,152, and maternal love 639. Cleanliness and patience were last on the list.

Here we have the acknowledgments of the men of France, given by the newspaper votes, that the woman who saves a man expense stands higher in his estimation than one who is faithful to him! A little infidelity they do not mind, if she is economical in her financial expenditures!

Were I a man and knew woman as I do (which would, of course, be impossible), I would wish a wife to possess the six virtues in the following ratio:

Kindness Would Lead the List on This Side of the Water

First of all, kindness. I would place kindness first—because the absolutely kind nature could not fail to be faithful to its highest obligations.

Fidelity would come second, as the natural result of innate kindness.

Cleanliness, too, would follow, as the kind, womanly woman could not offend or hurt her husband's feelings by being untidy in any way.

Patience, also, would be an outgrowth of a kind heart, and so would modesty; and, lastly, the ever kind wife would look to her husband's best interests and see that she was not extravagant. Kindness of thought would act as the one great quality needed in the world, in the church, in the market, in the family life today. Kindness is the child of love, and its pedigree goes back to God.

Economy is of questionable origin. It may be born of prudence and thrift, but it may be bred by avarice or born of greed and indolence.

It is as often a virtue as a vice, and as often a vice as a virtue. While wastefulness is always a sin, economy is not always a virtue.

The progress of the world comes, not through saving, but through using.

Tact Certainly Ought to Be Added to the Number

Then would I add TACT as one of the essential virtues in woman. The tactful woman keeps her house in peace and harmony. She knows how to turn away wrath by a soft answer. The tactful woman does not intrude upon the quiet hour her husband has reserved for his newspaper and his cigar with conversation which can be reserved for a more agreeable time. The tactful woman does not allow her great virtue of orderliness to become a nagging vice and drive comfort before it from the home. The tactful woman does not antagonize relatives or business friends whose good will is of value to the husband.

In a thousand ways the tactful wife, even with a tendency to overgenerosity, is a better helpmeet for a man than the tactless paragon of economy.

This Virtue Is Better Than Any of the Others

Yes, let us include tact among the great virtues in woman.

In-Shoots

Do not tell your troubles unless you are trying to borrow money.

If he can put up a diamond engagement ring she is usually willing to forget for a time that there is not much space between his pompadour and his eyebrows.

While we are thinking it over, opportunity often leaves town on a fast train.

The girl with a promising voice is often possessed of a coloratura temper also.

There are multitudes of sins that never seem to get under the mantle of charity.

Most men would rather get their light in front of a powerful reflector than hide it under a bushel.

Every man does not fall for the same brand of taffy.
